The TMF school of M.O.V.E.M.E.N.T is a conservatory of learning which will encompass many various elements of creative and artistic expression primarily in dance and music. In the aspect of dance, the primary genre highlighted will be house, hip-hop and b-boy, which adapted from the New York City's street dance culture, however many other genres from the American, European, Asian, South American and African dance art forms, will be welcome. On the musical aspect, in addition to House and Hip-hop, music in general will be explored and welcome from all over the world as well. The emphasis on MOVEMENT symbolizes the premise on what the conservatory is about, which in essence is to build on the importance of community, cultural awareness and most importantly communication.

TSOM will host a regular program of weekly house, hip-hop and b-boy classes, other dance genres will be available and integrated into the program as well. Our programs are welcome to all ages from beginner to advance either by profession or by leisure. Teachers will vary from either faculty of the school or by invitation, for now the musical aspect will only serve as function for the dance classes when needed, but in the future plan to have music classes provided as well. In addition to our regular weekly scheduled classes, TSOM will host different types of educational dance, music and cultural events such as workshops, discussion forums, and seminars from different invited guest speaker artists in dance, music and educational backgrounds' from around the world, which will range from dancers, Djs, musicians and cultural historians. TSOM will serve as the educational division to The Movement Foundation further exercising its five basic principles, which are to Learn, Teach, Educate, Communicate and Cultivate.
